Unified Threat Management - Global Market Trajectory & Analytics report added ResearchAndMarkets'.com. UnitedHealth Group Inc. agreed to acquire Change Healthcare Inc. in a deal valued at about $8 billion. UnitedHealth will pay $25.75 per share in cash, the companies said Wednesday, a 41 percent premium to change healthcare's closing price of $18.24 on Tuesday. Including more than $5 billion in debt to Change Healthcare, the deal is $13 billion. The deal combines Change Healthcare with UnitedHealth's OptumInsight unit to provide software, data analytics, technology and other services to the healthcare industry. The acquisition is one of UnitedHealth's largest and is yet another step in expanding the company's health services business under its Optum division. The companies said the combination would help simplify healthcare-related services to improve health outcomes and reduce costs. Both companies live in the complex behind-the-scenes state of U.S. health care, where companies determine which medical care is appropriate and provide services to transfer information about claims and payments between insurers, medical providers and patients. Together, we will help streamline and inform the vital clinical, administrative and payment processes on which health care providers and payers depend to serve patients, UnitedHealth Group Chairman and Optum CEO Andrew Witty said in a release. Change Healthcare rose 39% in premarket trading at 6 a.m. 56 in New York. They had reached 16% in the last 12 months by Monday. UnitedHealth fell 2.3% in premarket trading. Reach expansion In recent years, UnitedHealth has expanded its reach beyond health insurance. Through its Optum division, the company supplies more and more medical care directly to patients and sells consulting, technology and data to other healthcare units. Change Healthcare CEO Neil de Crescenzo will lead the combined business unit as ceo of OptumInsight, the companies said. Change Healthcare, based in Nashville, Tennessee, has about 15,000 employees, according to data compiled by Bloomberg. OptumInsight is the smallest business unit in the Optum family by turnover, but it has the highest operating margins in the company's reported segments, more than 20% in the last three full years. OptumInsight's revenue was approximately $2.8 billion as of June 30. This includes revenue from external customers and UnitedHealth Group affiliated customers. Change Healthcare reported revenue of $756 million over the same period. The transaction is expected to be completed in the second half of 2021. Venture capital funds linked to Blackstone Group Inc. about 20 percent of Change Healthcare's regular shares have agreed to vote for it, the companies said. It is expected to accelerate adjusted earnings per share of $0.50 in 2022, the companies said. The acquisition is the second major healthcare deal in the first week of 2021. On Monday, Centene Corp. agreed to buy Magellan Health Inc. for $2.2 billion. (Updates the title and LED with equity value.) Democrats' hopes of taking over the U.S. Senate received a huge boost early Wednesday after the party snatched one seat in georgia's runoff election and waited for the outcome of another race that came too close. To secure a narrow majority, Democrats must win both Senate seats that would split the chamber 50-50 between Republicans and Democrats with Vice President-elect Kamala Harris casting a tie. Senate control, combined with a narrow majority of Democrats in the House, would give Democratic President Joe Biden full control of the U.S. government and allow him to implement large portions of his agenda. The U.S. Treasury Department's 10-year benchmark yield rose more than 1 percent for the first time since March and S&P 500 futures fell as traders assessed the impact of possible Democratic victory of the Senate, including additional fiscal stimulus and tax increases. Nasdaq 100 futures plummeted, signaling concern about the possibility of more antitrust by internet giants under the so-called blue wave. Democrat Raphael Warnock defeated Republican Senator Kelly Loeffler in one runoff race, the Associated Press reported Wednesday, making her the first black senator in Georgia history. Republican Senator David Perdue trailed Democrat Jon Ossoff by about 16,000 votes early Wednesday. However, it may take days to get the final figure, as 17,000 military and foreign votes can still be counted late on Friday. The meagre results will almost certainly spark legal challenges or re-counting, which could also delay the final end of senate control. Uncertainty about the Senate comes as Congress meets Wednesday for a joint session to count electoral college votes that ratified Biden's victory, even as President Donald Trump urged Vice President Mike Pence and lawmakers to overturn the results of an election rigged on the basis of unsubstantiated claims. In Georgia, Republicans began pointing the finger at Trump for damaging their chances when they faced the possibility that Democrats could win Breeds. After Loeffler's loss, Republicans must hold on to a seat in the Georgia Senate to maintain their hold on the chamber and be able to block Biden's agenda and government. Government. GOP government officials were gloomy. From the figures we're looking at right now, the goal doesn't look good for the two current Republican senators, said Gabriel Sterling, an election official, a Republican. Warnock declared victory early Wednesday, noting that his mother, 82, had chosen someone else's cotton before choosing her youngest son as a U.S. senator. Georgia. I am honored by the faith you have shown me, and I promise you this tonight. I will go to the Senate to work with all of Georgia, regardless of who you vote for in the election, he said, repeating Biden's bipartisan tone. Warnock, 51, is a senior pastor at Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta. There are a lot of votes, as you know, he told supporters. And we have a path to victory and we stick to it. The race bounced back and forth between Republicans and Democrats throughout the evening, reminiscent of the November election, which Trump appeared to win in the early evening before Biden finally won by about 12,000 votes from the additional 5 million cast. Trump Questions Results Trump challenged the results as Democrats gained ground and votes were still counted. He wheeted that they are setting up a large voter dump against Republican candidates, and that Democrats just happened to find another 4,000 ballots in Fulton County, which includes the Democratic city of Atlanta. The president will continue his attack on the Elections in Georgia, as well as his own defeat on Wednesday, when he plans to address supporters in Washington. Hours later, some Republican members of Congress usually turn the formality of ratifying Biden's Electoral College victory into a lengthy but unconstitutional attempt to overturn it. Republicans needed a strong turnout Tuesday to win the expected Democratic advantage in early and mailing votes. It may have been complicated by Trump's false insistence that Georgia's November results were so tainted that they had to be thrown away. Loeffler and Perdue issued a rare statement late in the afternoon asking their supporters to go to the polls before they closed. Sterling, who has aggressively refuted Trump's unfounded allegations of fraud, blamed the outgoing president for the GOP defeat. When you tell people that your vote doesn't count and it's stolen and people start believing that – and then you go with two senators and tell them to ask the Secretary of State to resign and start a civil war within the Republican Party when you need Republicans to unite, all this is because of his decision-making on November 3rd., Sterling said. Allegations of fraud The fight over party control in the Senate made the races important enough. But given Trump's bottonless claims of voter fraud and corruption allegations by Georgia election officials an extraordinary hour-long phone call demanding that officials find enough votes to overturn the presidential election - the Games also became a test of Trump's continued grip on the GOP. If Perdue succeeds in winning, Biden will still face the GOP-controlled Senate, which is largely reluctant to support many of his plans to develop a federal response to manage the coronavirus pandemic, provide more economic stimulus or raise taxes on corporations and the wealthy. Perdue, 71, a first-term Republican senator and former business executive, opposed Ossoff, 33, a documentary filmmaker who gained national attention in the 2017 special election for the Atlanta-area House seat. Interest in the Games was strong, with record turnout, with a record turnout and spending of more than $700 million, including general election and run-off spending. Georgia's rapidly changing demographics make the state competitive for Democrats. White voters elected Loeffler with 72 percent and Perdue with 73 percent, according to AP VoteCast, a phone and online poll of more than 2,700 confirmed Georgian voters over the past eight days. Black voters, who made up nearly a third of the electorate, overwhelmingly went to Ossoff, 94 percent, and Warnock, 93 percent. Latino voters elected Ossoff with 55 percent and Warnock with 57 percent, the poll showed. Perdue and Loeffler and Ossoff and Warnock ran as party tickets during their unprecedented all-or-nothing runoff, with good reason. History suggested that they would be joined from the hip in the eyes of the electorate. In almost every way, the Trump Allies Calculations by Perdue and Loeffler were to stick tight to the president, or at least not alienate Trump voters and the bottom of the party. The duo both called for Georgia Secretary of State Brad Raffensperger to resign after he rejected Trump's claims of voter fraud, and both have supported efforts in the Senate to challenge the election result when Congress testifies on the November election on Wednesday. Both Republican senators described their enemies as dangerously radical and warned that Ossoff and Warnock would hand over power in Washington to socialists such as Senator Bernie Sanders and Representative Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez. Ossoff and Warnock described their wealthy Republican opponents out of touch with multimillionaires. Loeffler's husband, Jeffrey Sprecher, recently became a billionaire and is ceo of Intercontinental Exchange, the parent company of the New York Stock Exchange. Loeffler co-owns the WNBA team at Atlanta Dreams and some players have campaigned against him.
